“Thanks to the long-standing and varied experience I have gained as an architect and project manager, I am always excited about new challenges.”

After my apprenticeship as a structural engineering draughtsman in Basel, I worked in the profession for a few years before training as an architect at the Muttenz University of Applied Sciences. As a next step I pursued my ambition to spend some time abroad and worked for a year on international projects and architecture competitions at Enric Miralles in Barcelona.

After my return to Switzerland, I set up my own architect's office, for a while in conjunction with a partner. In the following 11 years, I covered the whole spectrum from small conversion projects to big industrial buildings. Subsequently, I worked as an architect and project manager for Otto+Partner in Liestal and later for Haberstroh Architekten in Basel.

In 2016, I joined Varem Development as a project manager and since 2021 I'm a member of the executive board. Working with clients, planners, companies and authorities in a variety of different disciplines is challenging and motivating in equal measure.
