“A plan that can’t be changed is not a good plan.”

When I was at school, I learned that there are no problems, only solutions. This has been my guiding principle ever since – in everything I do.

When I started my training as a structural engineering draughtsman, this insight kept me several steps ahead of many others. Problem-solving and constructive discussions are as much part of my daily work as effective time management. Communication skills and focussing on objectives are among my main strengths.

Thanks to these skills, I received a warm welcome and quickly became part of the Varem team.
