“Dealing with new challenges is my daily motivation and inspiration.”

After finishing school, I completed various military training courses which taught me to pursue my goals with determination and circumspection. The direct route is not necessarily the most efficient one. Although I always held positions in the financial sector, I could have also worked in any other field.

As the person in charge of process optimisation and workflow management, I was constantly required to deal with new situations. This was certainly the case during the development and establishment of an online bank for the Zurich Group, in my position of management consultant at KPMG and in the investment fund division of UBS.

In my capacity as property developer and investor, I face the multi-faceted challenges that building projects present on a daily basis. However, every new day also brings the joy of planning and creating something new and sustainable.
