“I am motivated to participate in the sustainable development of our built-up environment. My guiding principles are ‘keep it simple’ and ‘never lose sight of the important things.’”

I commenced my studies in Karlsruhe in 2003. During my integrated internships, I gained experience in construction management in Germany and in materials science at the Institute of Concrete Science and Technology in China. This was followed by a period of study in Scotland and my graduation.

In 2009, I started as a construction and project manager in the structural engineering sector in Switzerland, supervising projects for both private and public clients. I switched to project development in 2013 and studied for a part-time Master Degree in Real Estate Management in Zurich. Since then, I have been focusing on property development, predominantly in the residential construction sector.
